

Byron Bunker
Center Director - Heavy-Duty Onroad Center
Assessment and Standards Division
Office of Transportation and Air Quality
US Environmental Protection Agency

ABSTRACT

Since 1990, EPA emission regulations have been a dominant driver in diesel engine technology and of course emissions performance. From the regulators perspective, this presentation will look at past performance, current trends and future projections for diesel emissions and emission control technologies. A particular focus will be put on EPA's goals for these regulations and societal pressures that drive them.