

Kieran Murphy

General Manager, Europe and Asia, Life Sciences, GE Healthcare

Kieran Murphy, has more than twenty years of commercial experience in the Life Sciences sector. A graduate of University College Dublin and University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology, he has started his pharmaceutical career with Janssen Pharmaceutical, a division of J&J before expanding his marketing experience in European roles with Mallinckrodt. He became CEO of Vericore, a veterinary medicines and generics business in 1997 which was subsequently sold to Novartis in 2000 when he became CEO of a new vaccines division.

In the biotech sector, he has been CEO of Adprotech, a protein therapeutics developer and Innovata plc which was focused on respiratory medicine. In 2007 he became CEO of Whatman plc, which was acquired by GE in April 2008.